

Palm Sunday

STEPHAN DE BEER

Luke 19.

On palm Sunday Jesus entered the city on a donkey. And when he saw the city, he wept. Because so much pain and loneliness.

Shortly before, he visited the tax-collecting crook Zacchaeus at home. And Zacchaeus committed to large-scale restitution. Paying back fourfold of all he stole from people.

And just after entering the city, Jesus went to the temple, the church, creating havoc, chasing out the profiteers to make way for the poor; calling out the religious to live their prayers through justice for the poor.

He who wept for the city broke hearts into restitution, and broke systems into justice. Because of his abundant love and mercy.

Have a blessed Palm Sunday, making way for justice and mercy through every person being housed and cared for!
